

Our Family

We know this is a difficult decision, so we wanted to take a moment to share a little more about us so you can get a sense of who we are and what kind of prospective parents we'd be to your child. In the event you choose our family, we are able and ready to be meet you ahead of the birth.

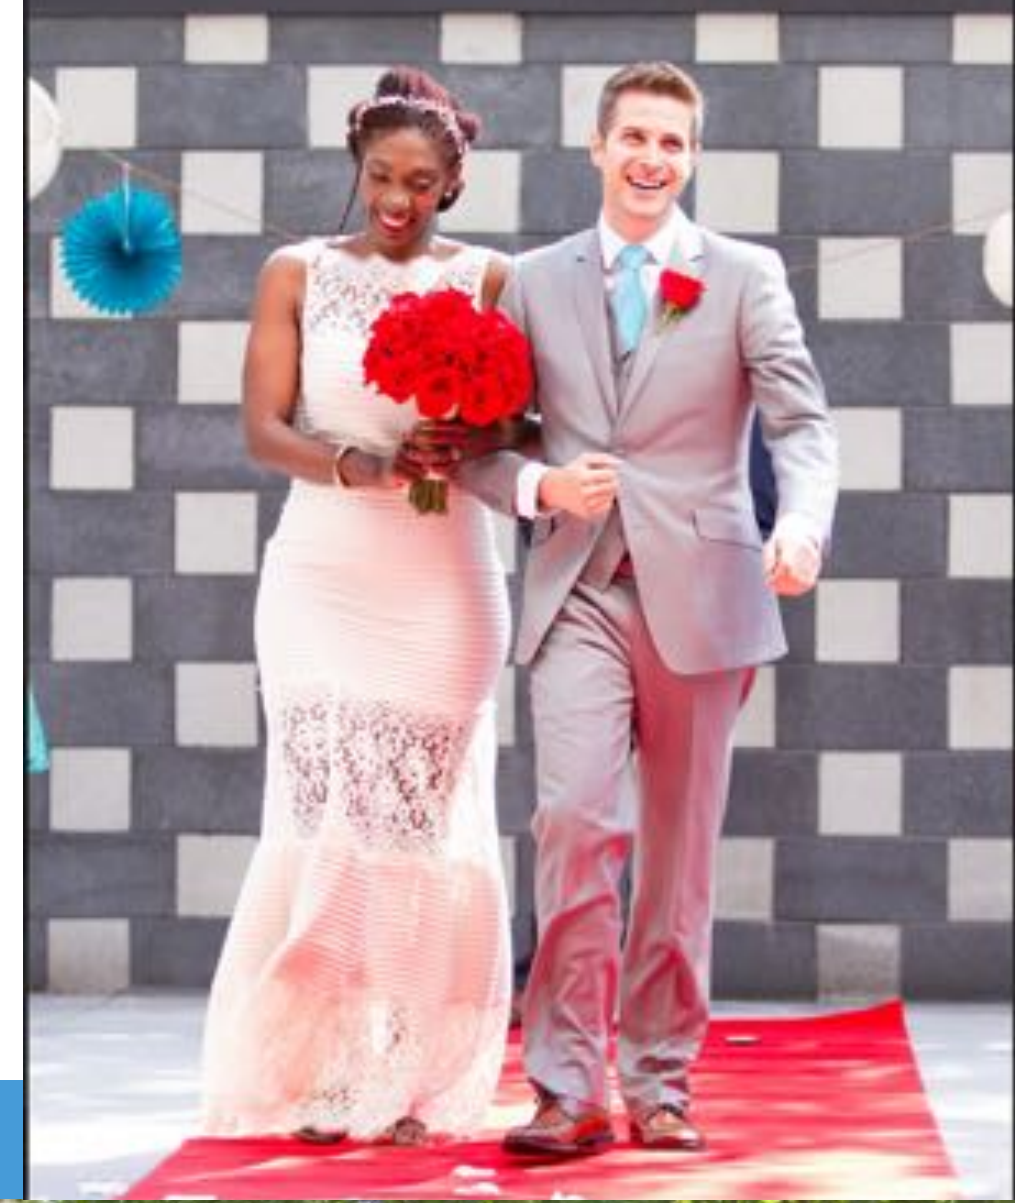

We're excited at the potential of sharing all of the love and laughter we've created over the years with your baby. We've always known we wanted to adopt, which is how we started our family. We have one toddler-aged daughter who is well suited to be a big sister. We see adoption as a unique familial relationship with you and the baby. We have several adopted family members and after adopting our daughter know that we can navigate the unique challenges that come with adoption. You can see Keisha's Step-mom (adopted) and Keisha's little sister (adopted) in our family picture below. Three generations of adopted Black children raised by Black women. Our families would be overjoyed to welcome a little baby into the fold. We also know that adoption is an expansion of family and we welcome you into our loving hearts.

Here's a little more about us as a couple...

Andrew and I met when we were both living in New York City. We've always known we wanted to be parents, working artists, and homeowners...even in a place as expensive as Manhattan. It was obvious from the start we shared the same passions: family, comedy, hard work, community, economic stability and structure. So as our relationship matured we were able to grow our lives together with so much laughter and love. We've always had amazing support from our immediate families, extended families and our diverse friend group. Over the years our careers flourished as did our finances. So in 2014 we were able to buy a home in Manhattan. In 2019, our professional writing and teaching careers brought us out west to the Los Angeles area. We've been fortunate to reconnect with our California family and friends. Most of Keisha's maternal family still lives in the state. We've built a cozy stable lifestyle where our careers and love for each other has been able to thrive. It's given us even more time to pursue our hobbies. Keisha loves interior design and Andrew's an Eagle Scout with an affinity for the outdoors. So we hike and take trips to the mountains whenever possible.

A bit about our daughter...

We came to be parents a few days after Thanksgiving of 2022. We got the call ten days before our daughter was born that we'd be matched. Being parents has always been our dream, so of course we canceled our Thanksgiving plans and hoped on a plane to Texas to meet the birth mother. We had the immense joy of being in the room when our daughter was born. Andrew even cut the cord!

Becoming parents is a transformative experience for us, we now know this is our highest calling. We know that we will do everything possible to make sure your child grows up healthy, educated, surrounded by love with an incredible sense of self, their culture and family. We promise this. We know whatever decision you make is the absolute right choice for you and your child, so trust your gut and know that it's really true when we say adoption is love.

In our home we have a passion for education. We are both educators who respect every child's unique education style and goals. This is why we plan to support all our children emotionally and financially from nursery school through their post-college studies. Keisha has her Bachelor's degree and a Master in Fine Arts which gave her the educational background to become a college professor. Andrew values education so much so that after two associate degrees he went back to school as an adult to complete his Bachelor's Degree. Even though we currently write television and films full time, we still make time to teach classes because we believe in the importance of sharing our specialized knowledge. We are also surrounded by various family members who also see the importance of education. Keisha's grandmother was a professor, her mother is a doctor, her father has a master's degree in applied mathematics, and Andrew's sister is a math teacher.

We've built a stable life where our careers, family and love for each other has been able to thrive. We're committed to giving your baby an abundance of love, support and access to the best opportunities possible. All of this to say, we are very excited to expand our family and raise children. All of our relatives, friends and peers are eager and ready to offer their support as we grow our family.
